Time for a story

THE story of two walkers who found the head of a pre-historic man frozen and preserved in ice, enthralled youngsters at Lowbourne Junior School.

Professional story teller, Michael O'Leary made a return visit to the school to chat to children from years six and four. The iceman story was just one of a number of stories that Michael told, using artefacts and musical instruments from his story box.

With participation and focused listening, children were then able to take part in creative follow-up activities.

"We look at the framework that stories have in common, which they can use to create their own stories," said Michael.
